Integrated Healthcare Strategies Announces National Air Dates for “Inside Business Review” Segment

Integrated Healthcare Strategies, a human resource consulting firm, will appear nationally on Inside Business Review for a segment on challenges faced by hospital executives and how healthcare consulting firms can assist with strategic solutions.

MINNEAPOLIS, MN – November 29, 2010 - Integrated Healthcare Strategies (IHStrategies), a healthcare human resource consulting firm with offices in Minneapolis and Kansas City, today announced the national air date for its featured interview on Inside Business Review, hosted by Fred Thompson.

The segment will air nationally on the Fox Business Network on Saturday, December 4, 2010 at 4:00 PM ET. It will also air regionally on CNN Headline News and various regional news networks over the next several months.

IHStrategies was proud to participate in the segment and contribute to the program’s initiative to deliver news that focus on industries, trends, and relevant issues in American society, and that is a powerful resource for management issues. The show is hosted by Senator Fred Thompson, a recognized politician and actor who first made a national name for himself with his role in revealing the audio-taping system in the White House Oval Office that uncovered the Watergate scandal.

Viewers of the Inside Business Review segment will observe the complex responsibilities of hospital executives, who must juggle day-to-day challenges with longer-term issues. IHStrategies Executive Vice President, Kevin Haeberle, comments on how healthcare management consulting firms like IHStrategies can partner with healthcare organizations as advisors on strategic operational challenges to help them succeed, which in turn benefits their communities.
